Cruise ships are large passenger ships used mainly for vacationing. Unlike ocean liners, which are used for transport, they typically embark on round-trip voyages to various ports-of-call, where passengers may go on tours known as "shore excursions". On "cruises to nowhere" or "nowhere voyages", cruise ships make two- to three-night round trips without visiting any ports of call.

The cruise ship industry started on the back of the passenger ship business. In modern, Western terms, regular cargo hauls from the U.S. to Europe established a solid pattern for cargo and mail hauls. By the year 1844, pleasure cruises became popular among the elite members of society. Pleasure cruise ships were separated from mail and cargo ships.
