A C identifier is a name used to identify a variable, function, or any other user-defined item. An identifier starts with a letter A to Z, a to z, or an underscore '_' followed by zero or more letters, underscores, and digits (0 to 9). C does not allow punctuation characters such as @, $, and % within identifiers.

C++ User Input. You have already learned that cout is used to output (print) values. Now we will use cin to get user input.. cin is a predefined variable that reads data from the keyboard with the extraction operator (>>).. In the following example, the user can input a number, which is stored in the variable x. Then we print the value of x:
