Comparison Of Microneedle Fractional Radiofrequency

Conclusion: Fractional microneedle radiofrequency is faster and more effective than FR for the treatment of moderate and severe acne after only one treatment. However, after several treatment sessions, both FMR and FR proved to be safe and effective for long-term treatment of moderate-to-severe acne. Therefore, invasive radiofrequency, such as FMR, or noninvasive radiofrequency, such as FR, can successfully treat active acne.

Fractional RF produces significantly better results when compared to traditional micro-needling devices. This is achieved with deeper needle penetration and the added component of new collagen production by radiofrequency energy. These results are scientifically proven and more well-established in research papers.

The hypothesis of this study is that both erbium-doped 1,550-nm non-ablative fractional laser and the bipolar fractional radiofrequency microneedle device are equally effective for the treatment of atrophic acne scars in ethnic skin (SPT III-VI). However, the bipolar fractional radiofrequency microneedle device has less adverse effects than erbium-doped 1,550-nm non-ablative fractional laser due to the absence of scattering and the absence of chromophore-specific targets - predominantly ...

Yes, RF microneedling produces more dramatic results than traditional microneedling or radiofrequency treatments because combining the two technologies boosts their effectiveness. Microneedles allow precise delivery of radiofrequency energy into the dermis, where collagen-producing cells reside, and the radiofrequency energy increases the level of controlled damage the microneedles inflict.
