A supernatural Black Knight is summoned by Sir Calogrenant (Cynon ap Clydnoin Welsh mythology) in the tale of Yvain, the Knight of the Lion. The Black Knight bests Calogrenant, but the Black Knight is later killed by Ywain (Owain mab Urien) when he attempts to complete the quest that Calogrenant failed.

Eight Knights Who Changed History - HISTORY

Galahad is the only knight in the Arthurian legends who cannot be said to decline in any way, because he is taken up to heaven and that's the end of him. Epic degeneration applies to King Arthur as well. I think you could well say that in the chronicle tradition, he is the great conquering king.

The paladins are twelve fictional knights of legend, the foremost members of Charlemagne's court in the 8th century. They first appear in the mediaeval chanson de geste cycle of the Matter of France, where they play a similar role to the Knights of the Round Table in Arthurian romance. In these romantic portrayals, the chivalric paladins represent Christianity against a Saracen invasion of Europe. The names of the paladins vary between sources, but there are always twelve of them led by Roland.
